

Subscribing To RSS Feeds Via Blackberry or Cell Phone

There are so many different models of Blackberry, and vastly more types of cell phones generally, that it is impossible for us to make anything more than the following general statements and recommendations.

- Depending upon the specific model of Blackberry that you own, its “Blackberry Browser” application may or may not be able to render RSS feeds on screen. Generally, the newer the handheld the more likely it will be that its browser will support RSS.
- Irrespective of whether or not your version of the stock “Blackberry Browser” application supports RSS, you may want to download and install one or more freeware RSS readers on your handheld. Choosing one that suits you will take time and experimentation on your part.
- Without endorsing any product in particular, the following list should serve to get you started:

Piconews, Viigo, Newsgator, Google Reader, FreeRange
